THE GOVERNMENT AND THE ARMY

Sold'ers cannot but regard as ominous the igns and tokens of the forthcoming proconcement of the Government, and they deplore the disastrous policy which seems to have been foreshadowed by Mr. Haldane's latest utterances. Soldiers who study the question at issue will sutertain no doubt whatever as to what are the requirements of the military situation. Statesmen who know the history of the Army will not contemplate any real diminution of it. Those who saw the daugers behind the Conference of Algeoiras. who have had to strengthen the garrison of Egypt, foolishly reduced, who were prepared to run the risk of a war with the Turk, who are confronted with the native danger in South Africa, will stultify themselves if they speak of it. After the great war, the exhaustion of the nationaled to a reduction of armaments, but there were some prescient men who foresaw the danger. The Duke of Wellington had vainly nrged successive Governments to organise th Army on a new footing, and Lord Palmerston declared to the Cabinet in 1846 that the Empire existed only by the sufferances and forbeara of other Powers. It was the opinion of Sin John Burgoyne that the very object of armed forces was being gradually lost eight of, the scale of armaments being measured by peace requirements. Notwithstanding the asalous efforts of that good soldier, Lord Hardinge, the British Army left for the Crimes still armed with the old smooth bore, while its general state of unpreparedness is recorded in all our histories. It had been stated by Mr. all our histories. It had been stated by Mr. in regard to the fire was derived from a Cobden and others that the addition of 25,000 thoroughly trustworthy source. Ep. E.G.]

or 80,000 men to the Army was impossible, because the country could not stand the burden We had not in any way adapted the Army to our policy, and in India we had enormously increased our responsibilities without increasing our strength, thus committing great political errors, which caused the Mutiny. Such have been the faults of politicians, moved by considerations of party advantage and forgetful of the welfare of the State, and thus has enormous outlay been caused, where a steady sufficient outlay would have sofficed. If expenditure be improperly reduced now, the day of reckoning, perhaps of disaster, and of much larger expenditure, will inevitably come ater on. The Army on all occasions of unwise re renchment has had to be saved by the soldier. Mr. Haldane cannot take his pattern in the matter of economy from Mr. Cardwell, because the reductions of that time were due to the larger measure in which the colonies were preparing themselves to undertake their

We had great hopes that the committee of Imperial Defence would enable the Governent to accomplish the nice business of adjusting military means to the ends in view, and we have not lost hope, though the test, it seems to us, will be supplied when Mr. Haldane makes his promised statement in July. Whatever may be the other purposes for which the Army may be employed, he may advisedly take the requirements of India as the standard. There we have gone on adding vastly to our dominions and millions to our population without ever doing anything to meet the larger responsibilities. The estab-lishment of British Regular troops in India this year is 75,031; the Committee of 1859 fixed its proper strength at about 80,000 so that even upon the requirements of nearly half a century ago, we are now some 5,000 men short of the proper number. But compare the India of pre-Mutiny days with the India of the present time. Then the area of British territory was 776,000 square miles ; it is now about a million square miles, being an increase of about one-quarter, while the population has grown by something like one-third. At the same time the population of the Nativa States has increased enormously, and we have added wast tracts of country and millions of people to the territory we have under control We have strengthened our obligations to defend Afghanistan, and we foresee the approach of a great military power on the northern frontier and through Persia, indicated by the strategic railways that have been made and are contemplated. Can it then be pretended for a single moment that any case has been made out for military reduction? The answer must be an unqualified negative. The need is rather for an increase than a decrease. ("Army and Navy Gazette.")

NEW TUG FOR THE EGYPTIAN

Messrs. Wm. Simons and Co., Ltd., Renfrew, annohed from their works on Monday week a powerful screw tag, which they have built to the order of the Egyptian Government, and which will be employed in connection with the harbour improvements at Alexandria. This vessel, which is designated "No. 10," is fitted with all the most modern equipment for tug steamers, and is fitted with one set of compound surface condensing engines supplied with steam from a Scotch type of boile structed for 120 lbs. per square inch. Built to the full British Admiralty requirements under the direction of Colonel Raban, Director of Works, Admiralty, "No. 10" was launched complete with steam up and ready for trials. Lieutenant John F. James and Engineer Commander W. D. Chope have acted as resident Admiralty overseers over hull, engines, and boilers respectively.

FIRE IN HARBOUR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE EGYPTIAN GAZETTE." Dear Sir, -In reference to the account of the fire in the harbour given in yesterday's issue of your paper we beg to state it is quite erroneous and utterly misleading.

The true facts of the case were as follows

The fire on the above steamer was successfully xtingui hed by the sole efforts of the officers rd crew, and no assistance whatever was rendered by anyone apart from the persons men The first person on the quay to render assistance was Bimbashi Randall and not the

FOUR MONTHS IN SINAL.

PROFESSOR PETRIE'S LATEST WORK

In the intensiting chapter on the mining expeditions of the ancients in his "Researches in Sinai." noticed in yesterday a isare, fro feesor Petrie pays a tribute to the organising abilities of the Egyptians of all ages, in which abilities consists the secret of their power. It has been added in arranging the expeditions to the mines, and it is diverting to read of the yariety and importance of the various recognis and including the expeditions to the mines, and it is diverting to read of the yariety and importance of the various recognis at offices, from the chief, who was a "egal-bearer of the pods," "chief in the department of the form of the land of the North," down the "chief of the loads." Every almost a secondary of the store house, and the "chief of the loads. Every almost of the work was fully provided for, and each department exception of two responsibilities. Once occasion a "chief physical" was mentioned as accompanying the party. It is avident that in the earlier times the arms forces were called upon to assist in the open inches, as, during the reign of Amenembat In reference is made to 734 soldiers being pres it.

The arrangement for the expedition commenced in December and continued until the commencement of the late season, when the homeward journey was begon, with the

Turquoise."

The expedition was recorded on a great stelle of the local sandstone, all the staff being availy mentioned, the chief of the party, of course, receiving great promisence. Much information is given us respecting the monuments of the Kings and private individua's of note, and to the student this is invaluable.

The Story of the Exodus.

Theologians will find the author's views on the wanderings of the Israelites of engrossing interest. His careful consideration of all the circumstances, added to his knowledge of the topography of the country, will win for him the sympathetic attention of even those who are unable to accept all his conclusions. In. Idealing with this question, he finds, after, a careful study of the diverse characteristics of the Jawish race, and their. Hierature, that "we cannot accept all the conclusions drawn from the documents, or the introduction of non-natural cancers as setting a priori bounds to archaeolorized argument."

He is of the opinion that the traditional identification of the region of Sinai must be accepted; that the itterary during the three days' journey into the wilderness was from Suer to Wady Charandel. "It seems clear that the writer of these itineraries knew the road to Sinai well. The description exactly fits that road, and will not fit any other." He holds that the known to f the journey does not tally with the theory that the march was eastward to the Gulf of Akabab, as there is no proof that the of the gulf.

the theory that the march was eastward to the Gulf. Altabah, as there is no proof that the Midianites may not have occupied both sides of the gulf.

An interesting hypothesis to account for the apparent exaggeration of the numbers of the Israelites is placed before us by Professor Petrie. He suggests that the thousands referred to are families or tents, and the hundreds are the total inhabitants of these tents. In other words, the thousands are considered to have an origin entirely independent of the hundreds. A test of the traditional figures on this basis gives the total in the census taken before the wanderings of 5.550, and 5.730 at the close, as sgainst the totals of 603,000 and 601,700 mentioned in the Book of Numbers. These figures tally with the present and ancient population of the country, with whom the larasities flought on equal terms.

Professor Petrie thus concludes his admirably compiled and extremely interesting record:

"The work of this last season in Sinai has served to put in order the Egyptian inscriptions previously known there, and to fix their places and connections which were uncentain before. It has also uncovered many new inscriptions are been drawn full-size in facilities in the season of the season o

An Interesting Theory.

An Interesting Theory.

An interesting Theory.

The last four chapters of the book were prepared by Mr. G.T. Currelly, M.A., and refer to places Professor Petrie was not able to visit, including the journey from Tor to visit, including the journey from Tor to visit, including the journey from Tor to visit in the explanation of the manne, which it is made in the explanation of the manne, which it has suggests was snow. This theory, however, it has suggests was snow. This theory, however, it does not enable as to account for the recorded statement that the Children of farnel ward daily sustained by the manner It is it hardly likely that showstorms would be so hardly likely that showstorms would be so frequent, nor can snow by any manner of frequent, nor can snow by any manner of freasoning be considered food, and this obstacle Mr. Currelly admits he adds: "High story of manna does not relievt be startling effect of manna does not relievt be startling effect produced upon the Hebrews by the sight of snow, the only other explanation that appeals to me is that the story itself is literally true."

Professor Petrie's work is, well a ranged, and the accompanying photographs and mass, of which there are 190, are remissivally good. The brok takes its place as the most valuable pronouncement on Sifastic research yet given to the world. to the world.

SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.

ANNUAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS.

The general meeting of the shareholders of the Spez Canal Company was held in Paris on Treesday weak. The report of the President, Prince Auguste d'Arenberg, begins by pointing out that, after the first few months of 1905, there was a slight diminution of traffic in the canal, 'caosing a faling-off of some 2,100,000f. £28,000) in the receipts. This state of things, however, may be considered as entirely satisfactory having regard to the remarkable and exceptional activity during 1904 following upon a series of years doring which there was a steady advance in traffic through the canal. The board of director propose, therefore, to maintain the figure of 141f. £5 12e.9. for the dividend, and to set apart 3,000,000f. £120,0000 for the reserve fund. The total receipts for 1905 amount to 117,308,196f. £4,5693,324), and the expenses to 40,984,184f. £1,639,364). During the year 1906, 4,116 ships, representing 13,134,105 tons, went through the canal. The average tonnage, which was stationary in 1904, rose in 1905 from 3,163 to 3,191 tons. Frogressive increase in the average draught of the vessels going through the canal is one of the assential elements in the increase of receipts. In 1835 the average tonnage was 1,743 tons. The progress in twenty years has, therefore, been about 80 per cent. Yet navigation in the canal is becoming after every year, as is shown by the diminishing number of foundaring. The company have just officed a second tay beat, so as to do all in their power to avoid delay in going through the canal. The socient to the Chatham furnished an occasion for showing the great resources of the company and the loyalty of the staff. Work is now proceeding from kilomètre 61 to Suez for the widening of the canal by a least 15 mètres. Prince d'Arenberg, in his opaning speech, referred to the stranding of the Settivity in dredging in the construction of new basins, etc. During the opening months of 1906 traffic in the canal with a large quantity of dynamite on board, and the consequent hindrance to traffic extea

THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.

"A! Mokattam" publishes a ataement from its ourrespondent at Bl-Areesh to the effect that the inhabitants of Gaza and the neighbouring villages, who have been hoping that the houndary between the Torkish and Egyptian territories would be drawn to the east of their towo, which would free them from Torkish role, appear to be displeased with the new delimitation, which has not fulfilled their hopes.

The Turco-Egyptian officials, says our contemporary, arrived recently at a well called "El-Mayeir," S.E. of El-Areesb, and at a distance of three and a-half days 'march from that town. The Egyptian officials are expected distance of three and a-half days' march from that town. The Egyptian officials are expected to arrive at Bi Areash in the first week of July. "Al Mokattam's" correspondent learns that many Jowish emigrants from Russis have come to Rumleh, user Gaza, where they are now residing, and that the Turkish authorities are profiting by assisting them to take pos easion of land in that district.

ARMY AND NAVY.

(PROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.) London, June 16.

London, June 16.

The sad death of Captain Soymour C. Bull, Inniskilling Dragoons, has been the almost sole topic in Service circles since the isalligance became known. Very much regret is expressed at his untimely and, and the wish that the perpetrators of the murderone assault will be brought to justice. In Doblin, Belfast, and Qork, where the unfortunate officer served sudcessively prior to the embarkation of the regiment, he was very popular and his good record of service with the regiment, and his hearty manner and genial temperament under all circumstances, made him hosts of friends at every place he served. It was a sad end to a promising career.

Some changes are announced in the commissioned ranks of the Royal Dablin Fusiliers. Captain and Brevet Major B. Fetherstonhaugh, on absorption, is poated to the 1st Battalion at Alexandria, for where he will emback in descourse; Major R. A. Rooth, on promotion, remains with the 2nd Batt. at Buttavant, and Captain H. J. Kinsman has been transferred from the 1st Battalion to the 2nd Battalion. Major W. Bromilow, 2nd Battalion, has been selected from amongst the majors of the regiment for the appointment of second in command of the 1st Battalion, Alexandria, and further orders for his embackation will be made. Major Bromilow received his first commission in the Dublins a little over 22 years ago. His selection for the appointment should in the ordinary course give him the command of a battalion before being caught up by the age roles. He got his company in 1898, and majority just at the close of the Boer war, in which he saw service from the autumn of 1901-till the end, including the operations on the Zaleland Frontier, and the Transvaal (Queep's medal with four cleape) and the numerous minor affairs in which the 1st Battalion was engaged.

The Sergeants' Mess of the 1st. Battalion Scots Guards, Aldershot, has just received from Colonel G.J. Cuthbert, late commanding the battalion, and now Assistant Adjutant General at Cairo, a very valuable, and much prized token of his regard in the shape of a notice beard. It is covered with blue cloth, and set in a massive silver frame, surmounted by the regimental crest, and the date "April 24th. 1906"—the day on which he gave up command of the battalion to the regret of all ranks. On the frame are engraved the names of the members of the mess, and along this bottom the inscription: "Pressnied to the Sergeants' Mess, 1st Battalion Scots Guards, by Col. Cuthbert, in remembrance of happy days gone by." The jift has occasioned the greatest pleasure amongst the members of the mess. Their old commanding officer is not likely to be forgoften by those who had the privilege of serving under him.

Sergeant Young, 1st Battalion, Royal Innis-killing Fesiliers, and Sergeant H. T. Foster, 1st Battslion Royal Berkshire Regiment; Sergeants J. Keenan and M. Lee, 2nd Batta-lion Royal Doblin Fesiliers, have passed at the School of Musketry, Hythe, and obtained the usual certificate.

A severe test of the capabilities of Monnted Infantry was made at Aldershot this week in a series of operations. The force of M. I. employed amounted to some 2,000 men, and the operations centred round the capture and retention of a bill. Sir John French, who is a firm believer in the value of the M. I., watched the phases of the fight with the greatest keenness, and the French Military Attaché was also an interested spectator. also an interested spectator.

Captain L'onel G. Tufnell has been appointed to the command of the battleship lrresistible on the Mediterranean Station from the 20th inst. The new skippar of the bittleship joins her with 36 years naval experience, as he entired the eservice as a cadet in July, 1870. He got his lieutenancy in 1881, was promoted commander in 1895, and a captain in June, 1901. Captain Tufnell is well known throughout the Service as the clever inventor of a system of instruction in signalling which obviates the necessity of using full sized flags. He was latterly employed in the command of the Astrae, which he recently brought home from the China Station. Captain Lonel G. Tufnell has been appoint
